Location

Gillshaw is located approximately 8.5 miles north-west of Gretna in Dumfries & Galloway. The woods are ideally located in one of the most desirable regions for commercial forestry investment in the UK. South Scotland and the North of England consistently attracts strong demand for forestry properties due to several key advantages. It offers easy access to main link roads and major timber processing facilities, allowing for efficient transportation and logistics. The region also benefits from top timber prices, which are consistently achieved thanks to favourable market conditions. Additionally, the area features favourable growing conditions, soils, and climate. The local economy is strongly supported by the forest industry, ensuring a robust infrastructure and community expertise. Furthermore, established transport routes and a comprehensive network of management and contractor resources enhance the practicality and profitability of forestry operations in this location.

Access

Access to the property is taken directly from the U232A public road, an agreed timber haulage route with a proven track record of accommodating timber transport from the woodland.

Gillshaw Wood is accessed at Point A1 on the plan, where a well-constructed shared farm road leads to Point A2. From here, a short section of internal track provides access within the woodland, along with a designated timber stacking area.

Description – Gillshaw - 45.60 Hectares

Gillshaw Wood is predominantly stocked with Sitka spruce and Lodgepole pine, with the latter established in intimate mixture as a self-thinning nurse crop to support early establishment and stand development. In 2024, approximately 6.66 hectares were felled and restocked. The remaining 28.50 hectares of conifer crop are now around 30 years old and are likely ready for harvesting within the next 5–10 years. Please see summary species table below.

The woodland is situated on predominantly peaty gley soils, supporting crops with an estimated yield class of 12–16. Looking ahead, the second rotation is expected to benefit from improved genetics, alongside enhanced soil structure and drainage, offering the potential for increased productivity.

Gillshaw also benefits from an attractive pond, fringed with birch and Scots pine, together with areas managed under continuous cover forestry. These features add significant amenity value while enhancing biodiversity and contributing to the overall landscape character.
